

MAE DANILLER
Of Counsel Consultant

One of the leading development professionals in the United States and one of the top membership consultants in the nation, Mae Daniller is the president of the consulting firm Daniller + Company. She serves as an Of Counsel Consultant to Dini Partners, with her specialties including development and membership campaigns, as well as organizational assessments, interviews, strategic planning, and reporting.

Mae has been recognized with Clarion and Addy awards, and awards from Art Direction Magazine. Her tested, proven work philosophy includes the application of her motivational skills, along with clear planning and an emphasis on producing and tracking results. In addition, she brings sharp, creative insight to the marketing and communications challenges that are such a crucial element of development and strategic planning.

A graduate of the University of Cape Town, South Africa, Mae worked as Publications and Curriculum Manager at Stanford University before moving to Austin, Texas, where she served as vice president at Daniller + Company precursor, Karl Rove + Company. Among Mae's Dini Partners clients are El Buen Samaritano, Habitat for Humanity, ARTS Center Stage (now the Long Center for the Performing Arts), Meals on Wheels, and the Fayette Memorial Hospital Foundation.
