Consultant

Sheridan brings substantive experience in major gift fundraising, campaign planning, volunteer engagement and personnel management from a variety of environments including higher education, the arts and health care. Driven by her passion for the incredible impact made by innumerable nonprofit organizations, Sheridan fosters collaboration and commitment within her clients and emphasizes discipline and integrity in her work.

Sheridan's professional background includes upper-level development leadership roles with Texas Children's Hospital and the University of Texas M. D. Anderson Cancer Center. While at Texas Children's Hospital, Sheridan led a $200 million capital campaign effort as part of a $400 million comprehensive campaign and oversaw a staff of six major gift fundraisers. As a major gift fundraiser at the University of Texas M. D. Anderson Cancer Center, she worked on a $130 million major gift initiative to support a research center.

Sheridan received her undergraduate degree from the University of Oklahoma in theatre performance with an emphasis in arts management and a minor in business and legal studies—a combination which provides a valuable ability to infuse creativity and innovation into strategic planning and problem solving.

Outside of the office, Sheridan enjoys tea parties with her two young daughters, snow skiing and fly fishing in the mountains of Colorado, and cheering enthusiastically during college football and basketball seasons.
